

Brigitte's Story

I knew from the age of 9 there was something "true" out there. Someone had the truth and I had to find it or I would be one of those to whom Jesus would say "I do not know you" on that fateful day. I have studied many denominations, and for a while I would be comfortable but it wasn't long before I was on the search again. Nothing felt completely right and true. Friends and family thought I was wishy washy but I knew I was ment for more. I was in turmoil from age 9 to 35 and then I was taken by surprise. I was looking in a history of christianity book and Catholicism was the only one for 1100 years. WOW. Those crazy Catholics couldn't be right. I couldn't read enough or fast enough. I called my local Catholic church and went to RCIA immediately. I couldn't believe it. How could they be right when every other christian denomination says they're sacrilige. Well, boy are they wrong. Praise God I finally looked into it and found just where I should be. My daughter followed right with me and my son took a little longer but is now proud to be Catholic. Sorry to say my husband isn't a believer yet but he's coming along. I would stay home and volunteer and read all the time if I could. I can't get enough. I've only just begun learning. I look forward to a life of learning and living THE faith. I'm so excited I could go on and on. I just pray that many more people answer their call to search and find the truth. God bless all of you and thanks for reading my story.
